

Get Your Blog Post Featured on Trufflehead.com!

Prepare your Trufflehead recipes. Take photos of your wonderful creations and write a blog post about your experience.

Here's what we need from you:

- Your post in Microsoft Word
- Your photos in horizontal format, largest jpg file you have (Please do not integrate the photos into the Word document.)
- Your name, email address, phone number, and blog address/website if you have one.

Send everything to talk@trufflehead.com.

By submitting your blogging materials, you are saying it is OK for us to use them on trufflehead.com and you understand that they now belong to ADITK, LLC– the company that owns Trufflehead. If we edit your material, we'll let you know so you can approve before your blog posts. We respect your material—and if we were in your place, we'd want to approve changes too. We will also only use your material on trufflehead.com unless we otherwise ask your permission. Submitting material to trufflehead.com also means you understand that this isn't for money or royalties. But, in exchange for your blogging materials, we'll provide links to your blog, if you have one.

One week after your blog appears on trufflehead.com, feel free to post it on your own website. However, we cannot allow you to post the actual recipe with your blog on your site. The recipes are copyrighted material and belong to ADITK, LLC.

We hope you are even half as excited about being a blogger on trufflehead.com as we are about having you join us! To show your Trufflehead pride, once we have your materials, we'll send you a widget for your website.

Guest bloggers are featured randomly on the Trufflehead home page. So tell everyone to come find you and read your Trufflehead blog!
